WikiTree Surpasses Major Milestone: 40 Million Profiles

November 25, 2024 – WikiTree, the community-powered family history website, has reached a remarkable milestone with more than 40 million profiles now added to its global family tree. This achievement reflects the dedication of genealogists and family historians worldwide to connect the past, present, and future through shared family history. The WikiTree community continues to set itself apart through its focus on accuracy, collaboration, and innovation. Members work together to merge duplicate profiles, verify sources, and resolve genealogical mysteries.

Of the 40 million profiles currently on WikiTree:

- Almost 35 million are connected to each other in a single web of family relationships, showing that all humanity is one family.
- 14 million have DNA test connections, leading us towards the ultimate goal of using DNA to confirm all the relationships in our tree.
- 1.1 million represent registered members who have added or edited family profiles.
- 260,000 are serious genealogists who have signed the Wiki Genealogist Honor Code.

As part of this milestone celebration, WikiTree is encouraging new members to join the collaborative effort. Whether you are an experienced genealogist or just beginning your family history journey, WikiTree offers tools, support, and a vibrant community ready to help you discover your roots and connect with distant relatives. To enjoy the benefits of free membership, simply go to www.wikitree.com and create your free account today.
