

Grip

Emir Brown-Murillo

Originally published by Frost Place Poetry (2023)

Barren be my mind after we meet and make a mess of mess. I've lost my grip on reality trying to keep the one on you. What can I say?

To better things-and not like they once were-but anew?

I suffer when you suffocate because

I know my grip is what chokes you.